

I object to the CBA's attempt to challenge Indiana's Telephone Privacy law in order to bombard my home with unsolicited phone calls under the guise of an "established business relationship." I understand the need to generate more business and to enlarge the customer base, however, not at the expense of violating the peace of the home. In my view, the media (radio, TV, newspapers and magazines) accomplish the same goals without burdening the public with dozens of unwanted and unnecessary phone calls.
